CALL FOR PAPERS

The Standing Committee on Medieval Studies and the Committee on Degrees in History and Literature invite contributions from Harvard College students of papers (fifteen to twenty minutes in length) in any discipline, dealing with any aspect of the medieval and early modern worlds. We particularly welcome papers that push against traditional boundaries in medieval and early modern studies, engage in interdisciplinary inquiry, or address modern imaginings and appropriations of the deeper past. Please submit the proposal form, along with a short abstract of 100-150 words, to memsymposium2020@gmail.com (subject line: paper proposal) by Friday, 3 April. A final list of participants, along with panel assignments, will be announced by Friday, 17 April. Proposal forms can be found at: <https://medieval.fas.harvard.edu/undergraduate-symposium>. If you have any questions, or are interested in joining the conference's planning and program committee, please contact Alan Niles from History & Literature (niles@fas.harvard.edu) or Sean Gilsdorf from Medieval Studies (gilsdorf@fas.harvard.edu). We look forward to meeting you, and learning from you!
